

If you could be a food,
would you want to be
one everyone likes
immediately, or would you want to be an acquired taste? How does this hypothetical
question translate to
human personality
and relationships?