

The Law of Children

In Shakespeare's play, Julius Caesar utters this phrase to describe people ruled by emotion rather than law. It's ironic because his own judgment is so clouded by emotional self-regard that he remains unaware of his imminent, lawless murder.

William Shakespeare
Julius Caesar III.1.44