

Because experience
is the best teacher
and because all
behavior involves some degree of
uncertainty, important
learning is inherently
risky and seldom
comfortable.