

WEAKNESS of LOGIC

Deductive Redundancy

Because a conclusion is already implied by its associated premise(s), deduction is circular reasoning and can therefore yield no new information.

Inductive Uncertainty

Because an infinite number of tests are required to produce certainty for a general conclusion, the results of induction will always contain some uncertainty.